Call for Proposals

2018 GRANTS IN CRITICAL REFUGEE STUDIES

For Current University of California Undergraduates

Grant period: January 2018 through December 2018

Application deadline: by 5:00pm (PDT), Monday, October 16, 2017

The UC Critical Refugee Studies Collective (CRSC) invites grant proposals from UC undergraduate students working on scholarly, activist and/or creative projects that focus on refugees. We seek projects that center refugee perspectives, agency, and epistemologies. We are especially interested in funding projects that engage communities as partners and/or involve refugee populations of California.

Funded by the University of California Office of the President (UCOP), the CRSC is a four-year initiative (2017-2020) committed to making the University of California the premier institution for critical refugee teaching, research and public initiatives. The CRSC seeks to promote projects that trace the impact of colonialism, imperialism, and militarization on refugee movements and that integrate scholarly, policy, and artistic interests with refugees' everyday concerns.

Topics/Themes

Over the four years of our annual grant cycles, we are exploring four different themes: time and space; land and water; secrets and stories; and wellbeing and resilience (sanuk/sumud).

In this second of the four annual grant cycles, priority will be given to projects that focus on the theme of Land and Water, though we welcome all proposals that shift the reference point in refugee studies from that of the state, humanitarian organizations, and policy makers to that of the refugees. We conceptualize Land and Water generatively, as sources, resources and epistemologies. Land and water can be both life-giving and life-threatening, and they have therefore been central to refugee experience and agency. For refugees, land and water can then mark borders, not as geographical givens but as sites that are dynamic, contested, and rethought. The themes of land and water implicate forces such as settler colonialism, imperial expansion, and military destruction in refugee displacements and resettlements. They also signify embeddedness, journey, and new cartographies of home-making and belonging. Possible projects include, but are not limited to: displacement; mapping; refugee mobility; settler colonialism; militarization; indigeneity; foodways; environmentalism; refugee resettlement; deportation; climate change; gentrification, etc.

Grant Amount

Maximum amount of each award is $3,500. The grant can be used to complete an entire project, to provide seed money to start a larger project, or to accomplish smaller tasks of a larger project.

In addition to research, activist, and creative projects, students can also use the funds to support internship work with organizations working on refugee issues

Due to the competitive selection process, the final amount awarded may vary and not be based on the proposed budget. All funds must be spent by December 31, 2018, or graduation, whichever comes first.

Restrictions

Candidates may apply to only one of the CRSC grant initiatives in the same funding cycle. Competitive candidates who do not receive funding for this cycle are encouraged to reapply in future cycles for which they are eligible.

Grant monies cannot be used for the purchase of computer equipment, books, and/or any other materials for personal use. Purchases of equipment and other materials for the project must be pre-approved and will be considered the property of the University of California.

Eligibility and Requirements

Currently enrolled undergraduates from any of the UC campuses at any level of their undergraduate career may apply. Candidates must be in good standing at their respective universities and secure a faculty advisor for the proposed project. It is expected that a faculty advisor will furnish a letter of support for the candidate(s) and will be committed to mentoring and guiding the grantee(s) throughout the duration of the grant.

All research involving human subjects must be reviewed by the Office for the Protection of Human Subjects (OPHS) to ensure the protection of participants' rights and welfare in the research process.

Outcomes

All grantees will be expected to submit a progress report of approximately two pages, due in July 2018 documenting the work they are conducting with the grant. Grantees will also be expected to present their work, whether completed or in-progress, at a conference planned for Fall 2018 at UCLA. A final report must be submitted soon after the conclusion of the term of the grant.
